

Course Description – Environmental Systems

This course is a lab-oriented course that enables students to make informed decisions about the environment using scientific problem solving. Topics of study include biotic and abiotic factors, ecosystems and biomes, flow of energy in an environmental system, and the relationship between carrying capacity and changes in populations and ecosystems.