

Class Change Deadline: The FINAL day to change any classes in your schedule for the next year is the last day of school, June 3, 2021. Please make sure to do research and ensure that the selections you have made are the ones you are going to be pleased with in the upcoming school year. Research of a class may include but is not limited to the following: reading the Course Description Booklet located at <https://www.cfid.net/en/parents-students/academics/course-descriptions>, speaking with current teachers of the subject and/or students who have taken the course, and looking at college websites for entry/program requirements. As the teacher who teaches the course is always subject to change, course selections should be based on interest, relevance, and rigor and not teacher choice.

Rigorous Course Selection: I understand that if I am signing up for a rigorous course next year and if I decide this course is too rigorous, my only option will be to move to the on-level version of this course if on-level is available. Should the course only be offered at a rigorous level, it is expected that I will complete the entire school year in that course. It is my responsibility to do my research on this course by speaking to the teacher about the content and pacing of the class. I should also discuss this with my parents to ensure I am making the best selection.
